Measuring your business performance and setting targets are important processes for helping your business to grow.. Many small businesses can run themselves quite comfortably without much formal measurement or target-setting. However, growing businesses need to control these processes, especially if they want to, for example:

The words that make my heart sing are only sometimes the same words that make my potential clients' hearts sing. And I've learned that I can be quite wrong about what I think is the value I bring to each relationship. For instance, nagging can be a competitive advantage... but I certainly never planned to be a nagger. Part of starting and growing any business is defining our 'value proposition'.
